However this charming Tuscan city with a population of just 400,000 offers so much more. The ocre or terracotta hue that the streets and roofs take when seen from the various panoramic view points above the city in the morning or evening light are unique. The narrow cobbled viuzze, tiny medieval streets, the enchanting artisan shops in the left bank area which still hand craft or produce their goods, the tempting gelateria with every flavour and colour of ice cream under the sun topped by whole fresh fruits, the elegant boutiques and trendy individual shops, the quiet understated elegance of the real Florentine inhabitants all lend a unrepeatable air to a Florentine sojourn. From the open top buses you will be a privileged observer to all of this and more. From spring 2012 a new bus line with route to Fiesole has been added in order to complete the full visit of city surrounding. Sit back and let your driver slowly take you along the winding country roads.
